SECURING YOUR LEGACY WITH A LIFETIME TRUST

Navigating the uncertainties of life can be challenging both for you and your loved ones, but securing the future of your loved ones need not be. With a Lifetime Trust you can enjoy the peace of mind of knowing that your assets have been safeguarded and will benefit your chosen loved ones exactly as you intend.

Many still believe that Lifetime Trusts are only for the wealthy, but this is no longer the case with ordinary folk now owning their homes and looking to protect their assets. Westminster Law has made Lifetime Trusts an affordable and practical solution and has made it possible for anyone to secure their family's future with the same protection and foresight that the wealthy have enjoyed for centuries.

Many believe setting up a trust means losing control; however, the reality is quite the opposite. With the right planning, a Lifetime Trust allows you to maintain full control over your assets both during your lifetime and after death. A Lifetime Trust ensures that your wishes regarding your assets are meticulously realised with precision and care.

By setting up a Lifetime Trust you can preserve your legacy, ensuring your intentions are fulfilled not just for the present, but also for future generations.

Why choose a Lifetime Trust?

- Avoid the cost and delays of probate: Grant immediate access on your death to some or all of your assets held in trust without the need for probate.
- Control and protection: Claim full control over your assets and shield your family's inheritance from divorce, creditors, and other predatory challenges.
- Ensure future care of your beneficiaries: Guarantee that the trust capital can assist your loved ones for generations; for example, for education, health care, and first homes.
- Retain more of your wealth: Strategically reduce or even eliminate potential inheritance tax liabilities for yourself and future generations.

Westminster Law assesses the circumstances of couples and arranges the Trust that will provide the best protection for them, their family and their assets.

GIVE ME SHELTER

by Paul Minton

Just as night follows day, so the universe seems intent on erasing my educational footprints. My old university building has been demolished, my old six form college has been torn down, and my old secondary school has been razed to the ground. The latter, which had opened in 1940, was particularly noteworthy, not least because of a mounded area that formed part of the grounds. Under the compressed earth of the hillock, hidden from view, was an erstwhile air raid bunker. After World War II, it had been repurposed as a wood store but by the time I was a pupil, it had been covered over. However, I still felt a sense of wonder whenever I found myself standing above this piece of wartime history some forty years later.

Interestingly, Newport was heavily involved in the manufacture of air raid shelters during the Second World War. Sir John Anderson, who oversaw the country's civil defence programme, invited plans for a small, bombproof shelter that could be placed in private gardens at little expense. The resulting Anderson shelters, as they became known, were effectively corrugated metal sheds with a curved roof, each comprising fourteen steel panels bolted together. The shelters could accommodate up to six people and were credited with saving thousands of lives. Corrugated sheets for over a quarter of a million shelters were produced by the Orb Steelworks in Newport. King George VI saw the site for himself in 1944, when he was accompanied by his wife and daughter, the future Queen Elizabeth II, on what was her first industrial visit.

One person who might have benefited from an Anderson shelter was Alfred Searle, an elderly solicitor, of Gaerwood House, Kensington Place, Maindee. After blackout on 1 July 1941, it is alleged his housekeeper ignored warnings that a light was still visible in an attic window. Unfortunately, the Luftwaffe chose that night to conduct an operation in the skies above Newport and it has been suggested the illumination might have prompted the enemy to jettison their payloads. Although some residents made it to shelters, Searle and the housekeeper were not so lucky and their property received a direct hit. Explosions in the area tore doors off hinges, threw windows across rooms and more surprisingly, reversed the lids on teapots and pushed books to the ends of their shelves. In one macabre story, a human leg was found in a loft in nearby Archibald Street after one blast had lifted the slates on the roof, allowing entry of said body part, before the tiles settled back in place. The remains of the ill-fated occupants of Gaerwood House were later interred at Christchurch Cemetery. After the War, the land on which the property had stood, was renamed Woodland Park. A large stone circle, with a modest plaque at its centre, has since been constructed to commemorate the tragedy.

Whilst Gaerwood no longer endures, the remnants of a WWII bunker still exist in Wentwood Forest near Langstone. The operational base (OB) was once used by a covert auxiliary unit called Jonah Patrol. The men were trained in sabotage and guerrilla tactics and could be deployed in the event of a German invasion. The OB was concealed about thirteen feet underground and fresh air was provided by a ventilation pipe connecting the interior to a hollowed tree trunk. Under cover of darkness, each member of the group would announce their arrival to the others by rolling an identification marble down the pipe into the bunker. An ammunition storage dump was also buried in the vicinity, which could only be found using secret markings on the trees. When the unit disbanded in 1944, these trees were felled but in so doing, the whereabouts of the weapons were lost for decades until some children fell through the dilapidated hatch covering the store's entrance.

MOST HYGIENIC

Holistic bathroom products for a new attitude towards life

Life-changing! This is how people describe the experience of using Washlet for the first time. Once they've encountered the soothing comfort of being cleansed with a hygienic stream of water, using just toilet paper will never seem thorough enough.

What is a Washlet?

Washlet is a toilet with a bidet feature. It gently and thoroughly cleans the intimate areas with a warm, gentle stream of water – a refreshing experience that brings more well-being and health into people's daily lives.

Beyond the hygiene, this life-changing product brings a sense of harmony and wellness.

The gentle, targeted and individually adjustable stream of water ensures thorough intimate cleansing – for good personal hygiene. The precise stream of water keeps you clean, and it's always pleasantly warm.

The wand jet stays hygienic and clean because it is positioned out of the way, namely above the ceramic toilet bowl. As a result, the jet does not come into contact with urine, faeces and dirty flushed water. This also protects the wand jet and technical elements in the event of any clogs that would cause water to rise in the toilet bowl.

The Washlet automatically cleans the wand jet before and after each use. Even when the toilet is not being used, the wand periodically cleans itself to ensure constant hygienic conditions.

Director of Newport Bathroom Centre, Dave Viggers, told SW Directories: "Toto's focus is on the well-being and health of people. That is why they use unique, specially developed technologies for the Washlet, which work together to ensure maximum hygiene and comfort. They state that 'Every toilet visit is an enrichment in everyday life!'

"Intimate cleansing with warm water is far more environmentally friendly than using toilet paper. People actually use far fewer raw materials, as well as far less electricity and water too.

"Flushable wipes are a thing of the past also – and this is good for the environment. This conserves resources and also relieves our waste water system. Flushable wipes create massive clogs in the server system that harm the environment.

"Trust me when I say this multi award-winning piece of bathroom technology is all-singing and dancing, and we are very proud to be the first retailer in Wales to offer this life-changing product. We invite you to see the Washlet for yourself within our showroom, where you can witness first-hand its amazing features."

Wildfire, the ever-present danger on Twmbarlwm

This dramatic shot of fires raging on the Medart side of Twmbarlwm was taken by local designer/photographer Rhys Bennet in 2018

As I write this article we are still in the heatwave and drought of July and even at ten miles away I can smell the effects of the wildfire that is raging on the mountain heathland around Blaenavon.

So far this year Twmbarlwm has escaped such calamity but it is an ever-present fear for us who live in its vicinity.

At last month's litter pick our group came across the remains of several barbecues. There were disposable barbecues, evidence of open fires (one still smouldering) and even packets of firelighters strewn about the area. With the surrounding undergrowth being so dry after many weeks of no rainfall, to have any sort of flame is sheer lunacy.

I'm sure I don't need to remind you about the devastation we witnessed on Twmbarlwm in 2018 as shown in the photos – despite CTS helping the area to recover by re-seeding and land management schemes, there are still areas not fully restored. So let's consider the consequences should such tragedy strike again.

Environmental and Ecological Destruction:

Habitat Loss: Severe blazes wipe out fragile heathland eco-systems, displacing ground-nesting birds, mammals, and small amphibians.

Peat Degradation: Dried-out peat burns deep beneath the surface, destroying ancient carbon sinks and accelerating climate change.

Soil Erosion: Stripping away protective vegetation layers leaves hillsides vulnerable to wind and heavy rain run-off.

Public Health and Air Quality concerns:

Toxic Smoke: Fires in areas like Blaenavon have blanketed South Wales – from Torfaen to Cardiff – in a thick, acrid smog.

Respiratory Threats: Particulate matter triggers severe breathing difficulties, residents are advised to seal windows and doors.

Historical Toxins: Deep burning peat can unlock legacy industrial pollutants (like lead and cadmium) trapped in the soil for centuries, raising long-term health risks.

Community and Economic Strain

Emergency Overload: Our Fire Services are severely under-funded and under-manned and control rooms are easily overwhelmed when multiple major incidents run concurrently.

Arson Investigations: Most of these mountain fires are suspected or confirmed arson cases, redirecting vital police and drone surveillance resources.

Financial Damage: Deploying water-bombing helicopters costs roughly £2,000 per hour, adding to the mounting hundreds of thousands in land restoration bills.

Tourism Impact: Blackened, dangerous mountains force the immediate evacuation of local campsites and decimate summer outdoor tourism.

The NRW website tells us that in Wales alone, fire crews have battled almost 1,400 wildfires already this year. They estimate that over 90 hectares of young trees have been destroyed.

Even if it rains throughout August, Twmbarlwm and adjoining commons will remain vulnerable to the possibility of wildfires. It is therefore vital that we all stay vigilant and stick to common-sense advice not to light fires or barbecues in these fragile areas.

Remember, if you discover a fire in progress you should ring 999 and ask for the fire service or if you witness or suspect a deliberate attempt to start a fire you should report it on the Police 101 service.

Terry Evans, Chairman of Cymdeithas Twmbarlwm Society

The fires of 2018 swept right across the hill fort at the summit of Twmbarlwm creating damage to the underlying archaeology.

Cymdeithas Twmbarlwm Society meet at the car park below Twmbarlwm's summit at 10:30 (What3Words location = ironic.sweetened.people) for a litter pick and volunteer workday on the first Sunday of every month to which everyone is invited, it's not all hard work and it's a great opportunity to find your way around up there. We organise walks and other events throughout the year so watch our website and Facebook page for details.

Swan
RESCUE

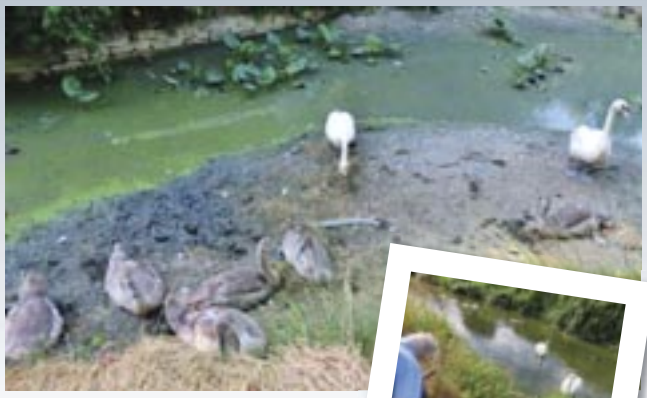

An Extended Rescue Sequence

As this story was being written, the rescue was incomplete.

The focus of the action is from 'George's nest site at the point in Cwmbran where the canal abuts against Commercial Street and extends for about a mile down to Ty-Coch. It is discontinuous with a break at Bellevue Road by the Fire Station followed, in about 300 yards of dense, and at times impenetrable reed bed by a man-made cascade (now completely dry) down to Two Locks. Beyond this, the canal meanders, with, in places a small quantity of silty water, but in others a surface which is dry and sun-baked, but untrustworthy to walk on.

It is routine to conduct regular, mostly daily checks to ensure all is well. Fishing tackle entanglements are a particular concern in this area. Around 17th July, there was not a swan to be found in their usual spot on the grass at the bottom end of Broadweir. Eventually, they were found on a bit of a 'beach' adjacent to an obvious narrowing of the canal before continuing to meander to Ty-Coch.

A group of local residents were only too willing to provide adequately moistened food, while serious thought was given as to how the rescue of the entire family was to be achieved. Issues to be considered included the number of individual rescues, seven cygnets and two adults, the hazardous nature of the terrain, and the relative remoteness of the location with regard to vehicular access. Finally, on 4th August, after a number of visits to be sure the situation was stable, two of us presented ourselves at what was obviously home. The only way we could succeed was by means of an extended swan hook, from above having used food as a bait to bring them within range. In this way, we caught two cygnets on this our first operational visit.

Immediately, we returned to the car and released them onto Broadweir. Our view then was that we should allow some time for the dust to settle before returning to try and repeat the exercise. We were fortunate; a rerun of what we had already done yielded a further two cygnets. A third visit the same day was totally unproductive.

The next day we presented ourselves, armed as before. The intention had been to focus on the remaining three cygnets, but following one failed attempt, we decided to go for the adults. This proved to be relatively simple apart from the shear physical effort of carrying them uphill back to the car. The reunion with the four cygnets on Broadweir was a delight.

After an interval, as we had done the previous day, we returned to the scene to assess the possibility of catching further cygnets. Alarmingly, for a while, we couldn't find them! Eventually we did; they were sort of hidden in the vegetation much nearer to Two Locks and well out of reach.

As hinted at the beginning, this story has further to run. Thursday 6th August, print deadline day, matters conspiring, hospital visit necessary, unable to assemble enlarged rescue team until mid-afternoon. However, when we met, it proved 100% successful, wonderful final reunion for the whole family! This was followed with pinpoint precision by a rescue call requiring attendance at Pencelli in Powys, also carried out successfully, casualty now in care, marking the end of another long day, such is life!

Newport Bathroom Centre

PROBLEM SOLVED

Dormer Bungalow loft space transformed using bespoke cut glass to make a shower enclosure

HAPPY CUSTOMER
Anthony Miles

A client from Newbridge recently visited Newport Bathroom Centre about transforming the loft space within his dormer bungalow. Homeowner Anthony Miles wanted a bathroom for his guests to use when visiting, as the guest bedroom is located within the loft. Adding the bathroom would alleviate the need to walk downstairs to the main bathroom located on the ground floor.

As the space is quite restrictive, NBC Director Dave Viggers used his many years of design experience in such matters to best solve the problem - the hardest part being, measuring and cutting the glass to fit the shape of the roof for the shower enclosure.

We asked Anthony a few questions about his experience, here's what he had to say:

What was the deciding factor to have Dave from NBC design your bathroom?

When Dave came around to evaluate, he suggested that the stud work for the bathroom to be extended by a foot. This in fact made a huge difference to the design.

How was the design process - from measuring to final result.
On measuring up it was all to millimetre precision as the small area was a challenge for him. He suggested a large walk-in shower with a bench seat with an overhead shower as well as a handheld. The overhead shower is within inches and is a perfect fit for an average six-foot person. The toilet is measured to exact specification so a man can stand up without hitting his head on the sloping roof.

Were there any problems along the way - how were they resolved?
No problems with the design process whatsoever, there was an issue with the shower head holder, as the one supplied seemed to be missing a piece. A quick phone call to Dave and he fitted a replacement with the help of his son Josh the very next day.

Would you recommend Dave and his team - why?
Without a shadow of doubt. Superb job from start to finish, plus the aftercare is impeccable - Dave is only a phone call away. His years of experience is an asset to his customer service, as he managed to utilise a very awkward space to its very best.

So, if you're looking for a high-level of quality service from a professional team who strive to get the very best for you and your budget, then simply give us a call.

MIND YOUR LANGUAGE!

Newport u3a resumed its 40 active, social and cultural groups for the retired on 9th September, including various language groups.

We can now offer FRENCH - Beginners, Intermediate or Literature & Culture, GERMAN – Beginners, ITALIAN – Conversation, SPANISH - From Scratch or Improvers and WELSH - Beginners, Intermediate or Advanced, something for all abilities!

Members aim to be able to read, speak and understand their chosen language whilst abroad. But it's not all about conjugating verbs; some read books or newspapers whilst others have quizzes or play games en parlance! Members also attend our Annual Christmas Concert to perform a Carol in their relevant language.

u3a learn, laugh, live

Newport u3a meets at the Dolman Theatre Wednesday to Friday at 9:45-15:00 during term time. For more information visit newport.u3asite.uk or phone Angela Robins on 07983 130541.

Hardy Plant Society

The HPS Monmouthshire group is for people who love plants and gardening. You can join as a member, but non-members are also made very welcome. The meetings always take place at Little Mill village hall NP4 0HE on the second Saturday of each month from September to May. Before the speaker, there's time to talk, enjoy refreshments and perhaps buy some plants. The group organises garden visits in the summer, discussions, dinners, plant sales and more throughout the year.

Our first meeting of the autumn season will be on Saturday 5th September at the Hall in Little Mill. Tim Stretton head of gardens at Mounton House near Chepstow will talk about 'New Beginnings at Mounton House and Other Tales from a career in Horticulture'.

On Friday 18th October at the Greener Abergavenny Fair, an annual community event featuring eco-sourced events, there will be a 'Resilient Gardeners Question Time' at 13.00 with a set of expert guests to answer your questions concerning growing food, flowers, trees etc both in warmer, wetter and windier winters and long, hot summers. What problems are faced, what opportunities are created? Can these be overcome and new ones appear?

Lastly, please don't forget the wonderful Usk Show is at the Showground on Saturday 12th September from 9am. There's nothing quite like it!

Care starts at home

At Home Instead Newport, we offer personalised care and support to help you or your loved one continue living safely, comfortably and independently at home. Whether you are looking for support for one hour a day, companionship, personal care, or full-time live-in care, our team is here to help.

We understand that arranging care can feel overwhelming, and that encouraging a loved one to accept support at home is not always easy.

The support we provide is built around consistent, relationship-led care. We carefully match our clients with trusted Care Professionals who understand their needs, routines and preferences, allowing meaningful relationships to develop over time.

All the carers are very kind, helpful and very supportive. I can't fault the service at all.
